

How to Catch a Phish

The red flags indicate this may be a Phishing attempt!

Never click on a link like this! In this particular case, the link provided takes you to an unsecured website asking for a full menu of your personal information, including credit card account number and password, social security number, and mother's maiden name. This information could be used for all kinds of fraudulent purposes, from raiding your bank accounts to ruining your credit by opening dummy accounts in your name. Information about your e-mail password can give hackers the entry they need to launch more cyber-attacks from our UIndy computer servers. The resulting flood of e-mails leaving our system can seriously impair delivery of legitimate e-mail to our campus community.
